Aizu Sake Brewery Museum

The museum contains the sake-making equipment, records, old documents, books, and household items of the Konohana brewery, boasting a sake-brewing tradition of over 300 years. This also has a sake-tasting corner and souvenir shop. Entry of guide dogs allowed.

Oyakuen(Japanese Garden)

Oyakuen was used approximately 600 years ago as a villa for the then lord of the Aizu domain. Subsequently, in the mid-17th century, within the grounds the lord of the Aizu clan started growing medicinal herbs with which to protect the citizenry from epidemics, leading to the Oyakuen name, which literally means "medicinal garden." As the traditional garden is still as it was long ago, it is now an important national asset. The buildings within the grounds were also used by the lord as a place of relaxation and for entertainment. Accordingly, this building is still devoted to Japanese tea, and even now, you can enjoy such an experience. We hope you'll take the time to enjoy traditional ceremonial tea in a Japanese garden here in Aizu at the Oyakuen.
